

Expedia US Name Correction Form for Flight Bookings

Important information about name corrections

- The name on your booking must match the name on your government issued photo ID (for example your drivers license for a domestic flight, or your passport for international travel). You may be denied boarding or entry at your destination if your name is incorrect.
- Some airlines allow for corrections to minor spelling errors, or correction in the event of a legal name correction. In some cases you may be required to rebook your flight under the correct name, and cancel your original flight booking. Transferring your airline tickets to another name or a different traveler may not be permitted.
- Correcting the name on your flight booking may incur airline change penalties and require you to pay a difference in fare.
- Depending on the airline and the type of flight you have booked, a name correction may require processing by both our support team and the airline, so cannot be completed immediately. If your booking is with multiple airlines, there may be separate change policies for each carrier.
- Once you have completed the form below, our Customer Support team will contact you to advise the airlines name correction process and any associated costs. Although a name correction may be complicated, we'll try to minimise any delays. We appreciate your patience in the event a name correction requires additional steps.
- Some airlines may charge a fee to correct the name on the ticket.
